“My work is a reflection of who I am. I work in a spontaneous manner until I have built up a ‘surface’ on my support by pouring paint, layering papers, taking off partial surface, sanding and repainting. The process of making the art is as important to me as the satisfaction I feel when the final image is conveyed.”

Jan Sitts experience and enthusiasm create an atmosphere of fun and spontaneity inspiring new directions and discovery through innovative combinations of design and materials. Layering creates depth involving line, shape, color and tone in both abstract and representational designs. During the course the class will explore the use of various supports such as canvas, illustration board and watercolor paper. Additionally we will experiment with layering of various rice, sumi, Yupo, or Magnani papers. Specialized papers will be available for purchase from the instructor during the class. All paints used will be water-based. Jan Sitts new book TextureColorFeeling was released in January 2007.
