This workshop is designed to help you find a personally satisfying and expressive style of painting. Through lectures, slide presentations, demonstrations and one on one consultation you will be encouraged to identify those approaches to painting that are best suited to your temperament and interest. Sketches and photographs are useful but what is most useful is a head full of ideas. Not simply a "how-to-paint" workshop, this class helps each individual paint the way they want to and produce work with real meaning.

"The misconception many people have about creativity is that it's some sort of external thing — that you're hit by a bolt of lightning or that you have a great insight. It's really a rational thing. When you find your own unique approach to working through problems, creativity manifests itself in your work. Creativity is also the reason I think we get involved in mixed media. It's not so much that we're trying to be creative as that we're trying to accomplish something, and in our quest we look for ways to get there.
